CARMAN REVOLVER CLEW

Tumult in Cambridge Vice Hearing

ELOPER'S TRIAL IS AGAIN OFF

For the second time the trial on an abduction charge of Louis Elsman, the chauffeur who eloped with Fern Hallian of Hull, was mysteriously postponed today.

Elsman was in the Hingham court today with his attorney, Thomas H. Buttimer. Michael J. Sughrue appeared on behalf of Mr. Hallian, the girl's father. By apparent consent they asked that the case go over one week.

Judge Pratt assented and they left the court at once. Neither Fern Hallian, her mother nor her father appeared. There were many curious spectators in the court who hoped to see Elsman and the girl tell their stories.

After the continuance all sorts of rumors were afloat. One was that a more serious charge is to be preferred against Elsman at once. Another was that plans are afoot for a settlement.

The first rumor was denied by Chief Reynolds of Hull. He said:

"I know nothing of another charge against Elsman. He is charged with abduction. That is a sufficient serious charge."

On the other hand, talk of a settlement is discounted by the statement of Mrs. Hallian:

"We certainly will never settle this case. We will do everything to bring about Mr. Elsman's punishment. As for the talk that Fern still loves Mr. Elsman, she will show how false that is when she tells her story on the stand."

Sympathy of Wilson Wired Mrs. Lurton

WASHINGTON, July 13.—President Wilson today sent the following telegram of condolence to Mrs. Horace H. Lurton, widow of Associate Justice Lurton of the United States Supreme Court, who died in Atlantic City: "Our deepest sympathies go out to you in your bereavement. The country has lost a gifted and honored servant, whose memory it will always honor, and I am sure that my feeling is the feeling of the whole country."

60 MILLION IN LOOT OF RAILROAD

The Interstate Commerce Commission finds:

That the New Haven lost $60,000,000 to $90,000,000 in crooked transactions under Mellen.

That the directors were blunt tools of Morgan and Mellen.

That they should be held liable in civil and criminal courts for results of their negligence.

That the acquisition of the Boston & Maine was illegal and monopolistic.

That the road was guilty of prodigate waste and corruption in five States.

That Dillard should be sued for his gigantic fraud on the stockholders.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—That the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad system during the period of Charles S. Mellen's presidency was a "corrupt monopoly"; that the directors were criminally negligent in the discharge of their duties; that the subsidiary corporations of the system should be condemned for the part they played in the system, and that the remedy for the evils lies in the public conscience and better laws, was the report made by the Interstate Commerce Commission to the Senate today on its investigation into the affairs of the railroad.

The Commission declares "that the loss to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad by reason of waste and mismanagement will amount to between sixty and ninety million dollars."

"The splendid property of the New Haven railroad itself will be called upon for many a year to make up the drain upon its resources resulting from the unpardonable folly of the transactions outside the proper field in which stockholders supposed their moneys were invested," continued the report.

DIRECTORS DENOUNCED.

Declaring that most of the directors of the New Haven took their duties lightly, the commission declares that "if these directors, who were faithless to their stewardships, were held responsible in the courts and at the bar of public opinion for the failure to do those things which should have been done, the lesson to directors who do not direct would be very salutary.

"Directors should be made individually liable to civil and criminal laws for the manner in which they discharge their trust. It should be just as grave a crime to plunder stockholders or the public through a railroad corporation as it is to personally rob an individual."

Referring to the manner in which the New Haven directors are alleged to have left the control of the railroad to the "higher-ups," the commission says:

"The directors seem to have acquiesced in the efforts of the Mellen

REFUSES TO OUST OFFICIAL

The "Fighting Fifteen" appeared before Mayor Timothy Good in Cambridge with twenty witnesses to back up their demand that the Mayor remove from office Commissioner of Public Safety Henry J. Cunningham.

The hearing broke up after hot words had passed and after a physical clash had been narrowly averted. A throng attended the hearing, which was held in the aldermanic chamber.

Mayor Good took the evidence and exhibits after the hearing and said he would present them at once to the Grand Jury.

The fifteen, ministers and laymen, charge Cunningham with neglect of duty in allowing prize fights, gambling, illegal liquor selling and Sunday sales in Cambridge. At a hearing last week Mayor Good demanded evidence and refused to consider the request without it.

Today had feeling developed at the very beginning of the hearing, and Mayor Good threatened to eject the whole fifteen of the committee, and shook his fist at the Rev. Richard Wright, after Mr. Wright had refused to fall in with Mayor Good's requests as to how the hearing should be conducted.

After two hours of argument and evidence, Mayor Good flatly refused to remove Cunningham, told the fifteen they were notoriety seekers, and that they should be ashamed of themselves.

TWENTY WITNESSES SWORN.

The party of ministers arrived at the City Hall shortly before 10 o'clock. In the party were Rev. Dr. Solon L. Campbell, Rev. Richard Wright and Rev. H. S. Truman. About twenty witnesses summoned by the ministers were sworn. Rev. Mr. Campbell outlined the evidence at hand and turned the matter over to Rev. Mr. Wright, who said:

"Mr. Mayor, we are ready with our evidence."

MAYOR GOOD—It has got to be better evidence than you gave me a week ago. It has got to be the real thing.

REV. MR. WRIGHT—We have it, your honor.

Rev. Mr. Wright then called a Mr. Moxen as the first witness. He testified to prize fights held in a garage near his home.

The next witness, and the one about whom the trouble started, was Wellman Y. Taylor, an agent for the Watch and Ward Society. He showed stubs of two tickets to a Cambridge prize fight, which he said he purchased for $1 each in a room in the Old South building, without having to show a club membership card. He said he was handed a membership card after purchasing the tickets.

Mayor Good asked Taylor if he considered himself a member of the club. "I do not," replied Taylor.

MAYOR WARNS MINISTER.

Rev. Mr. Wright was warned by Mayor Good against prompting Taylor.

"Did you witness the fight?" Mayor Good asked the witness.

"I attended the fight," replied Taylor. "I got in all right, but the crowd got wise to me, things grew pretty hot and I jumped out."

At this point Rev. Mr. Wright again interrupted. Mayor Good cried:

"You keep quiet or out you go. When I want you to talk, I'll ask you."

The Rev. Mr. Wright replied: "I will talk. We have our rights. This is a public hearing. I'll not keep quiet."

Mayor Good shook his fist at the minister. "You'll have to keep quiet or out you go and your whole bunch with you."

Mayor Good—I'm running this hearing. I know how to run this affair.

Innocent / Guilty

Two noted women discuss Mrs. Carman. One defends her, one accuses.

Mrs. Stephen B. Ayres.

MRS. AYRES, WIFE OF CONGRESSMAN AYRES AND LEADER OF THE CONGRESSIONAL SET IN WASHINGTON, SAYS:

There has not been sufficient evidence shown so far to prove Mrs. Carman guilty. I think the the installation of the dictagraph was prompted by her love for her husband—to prove to her own mind that the malicious insinuations of her neighbors as to Dr. Carman's fidelity were absolutely without foundation. The pathetic part of the whole tragedy is the fact that the venomous tongue of gossip has placed Mrs. Carman in the jail at Mineola today.

Miss Amy Wrenn.

MISS WRENN, A PROMINENT WOMAN LAWYER, SAYS:

Personally, I believe that Mrs. Carman is guilty of the murder of Mrs. Bailey, but I do not think that the authorities will be able to convict her on the scant evidence that they have unearthed against her. At present she denies all guilt; later, if the district attorney clinches the case against her with a positive identification, I believe that she will break down and admit her guilt. We cannot tell what sort of defence she will put in.

Sailor Held Here Pending Finding of Fall River Girl

James McCarthy, a sailor aboard the battleship Nebraska, who is being held pending an investigation relative to the whereabouts of Jessie Smith of Fall River, was turned over to the civil authorities today and held at the Charlestown police station.

A warrant was taken out by the girl's mother charging McCarthy with enticing her daughter to Boston. The girl disappeared on July 1. Mrs. Smith said: "I have appealed to officers of the ship to make McCarthy tell where Jessie is, but it is no use. He has admitted bringing her to Boston, but will not tell where she is."

Colonel Cully of State Militia Dead

Lieutenant-Colonel James Cully, M. V. M., died early today at the Carney Hospital of a complication of diseases which culminated in pneumonia. He was ill at the Lakeville encampment last week and once fell from his horse for weakness, but insisted on remaining at camp. He lived at No. 2 Victoria street, Dorchester.

Stock Exchange Seats Go Begging

There are more Boston Stock Exchange seats now offering for sale than at any time in many years. There are half a dozen seats on the market, with no bidders. The last sale was at $15,000, about four months ago.

Huerta Ready to Flee Under British Guard

VERA CRUZ, July 13.—An attache of the British legation at Mexico City arrived here last night and was still in conference with Consul J. S. Hutchison today. His coming soon after Esteva Ruiz, former acting foreign minister, had stated that Rear Admiral Craddock was arranging for the departure of President Huerta from his capital under British protection, strengthened the belief that the end of the present government is near.

New Bubonic Plague Case.

NEW ORLEANS, July 13.—Another case of bubonic plague has been discovered here. The victim is a negro woman.

SEARCH MARSH NEAR DOCTOR'S HOME FOR WEAPON OF DEATH

NEW YORK, July 13.—Following the discovery of a clew to the .38-calibre revolver with which Mrs. Louise Bailey was shot to death in the office of Dr. Edwin Carman at Freeport, District Attorney Smith of Nassau County today ordered that a marsh near the Carman residence be dragged.

He believes that the weapon will be found there. According to information furnished the District Attorney by private detectives, the revolver was taken from the Carman home on the day following the murder and thrown into the marsh.

This was before any suspicion had been directed against Mrs. Florence Carman, wife of the physician, by the discovery of the fact that she had installed a dictagraph in her husband's office.

The finding of the revolver and the establishment of the identity of the person who tried to conceal it will be followed by the arrest of that person on a charge of being accessory to the murder.

Detectives were sent out today to follow the shopping route that Mrs. Carman says she took in Brooklyn on the day of the murder. They believe there is a possibility that the weapon was purchased that day.

While the State prosecutor was directing his efforts to clinch the case against Mrs. Carman, who is directing her own defence from the Mineola jail, her lawyer, George M. Levy, took steps by which he hoped either to shatter the testimony of E. T. Bardes, chief witness for the State, or discredit his reliability.

Under the terms of an agreement with the District Attorney, Levy subjected Bardes to a grilling examination. The lawyer for the defence had accumulated a mass of evidence relating to the entire life record of Bardes, and it was on this that his examination was based.

The story of Celia Coleman, the maid of the household of Dr. and Mrs. Carman, as secured by Attorney Levy, became known in full for the first time today.

District Attorney Smith expects the maid to change her story materially, contradicting it in many important points, when she is called before the Grand Jury, which convenes tomorrow to consider the case.

The maid's whereabouts, following her alleged "kidnaping" by parties interested in the prosecution, were a mystery today, but counsel declared she could be found when needed.

It is generally believed here that the maid is being guarded until the District Attorney is ready to call her before the Grand Jury.

In view of the prosecution's new

WARSHIPS OFF ULSTER, READY TO LAND TROOPS

MOVILLE, Ireland, July 13.—Two British transports, convoyed by two warships, anchored off Lough Foyle early today and were held in readiness to rush troops to any point along the north coast where hostilities might break out in connection with the Orange day celebration.

LONDONDERRY, July 12.—An armed conflict between Unionist Anti-Home Rulers and Irish Nationalists was narrowly averted when the celebration of the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne began here today. Shortly after daybreak the Protestant celebrators began firing salutes from a battery of artillery. The artillery was located on an eminence on the outskirts of the city and dunning waddling fell upon the roofs of a number of houses. The Home Rulers, believing that the Unionists had begun actual hostilities in a civil war, barricaded themselves and secured arms, preparing to fight to the last.

A heavy consignment of Mauser rifles and ammunition consigned to the Nationalist volunteers (supporters of Home Rule), was landed from an American steamer to a secluded point on Lough Foyle early today. They were transfered in motor cars to Nationalist headquarters outside of Londonderry.

HELD FOR BROOKLINE BREAK.

Clarence Gordon, Roxbury, and Charles Mitchell, address unknown, were in Brookline Court today charged with breaking into the home of Frank J. Donaldson, No. 24 Park street, Brookline. They were held for the grand jury.

SIX MONTHS FOR STRIKING WIFE.

Robert D. McKenzie, forty, of No. 286 Highland street, was in Roxbury Court today charged with punching his wife in the face. He was given six months in jail and appealed.

PLAN TO FIX GUILT ON DOCTOR'S WIFE

theory, her story becomes of the greatest importance. This new theory is that Mrs. Bailey was shot by someone who entered Dr. Carman's office from the pantry door.

One story told by Celia Coleman is that she hid in the pantry after the shooting. The state's attorney contend that the breaking of the window in the doctor's office was a ruse, pure, probable and startling.

State of New York, County of New York.

I reside and work with the family of Dr. Edwin Carman, and have been so employed for about one and one-half years. I don't know either Dr. or Mrs. Carman before I came. I remember June 26, 1914. I arose about 6:30 a. m. I was the first to awaken. I fixed breakfast and did general cleaning and Mr. Conklin, Mrs. Conklin, Mrs. Powell and Elizabeth came down first about 7:00 and Mrs. Carman came after, about 8 a. m. fully dressed, and Dr. Carman came down about 8:30 a. m. Mrs. Carman, Mr. Conklin and Elizabeth left the room a little after 8 a. m. and said they were going to the city. They all returned back about 8:30, and in about 15 minutes all left again for the train.

I next saw Mrs. Carman about 7 p. m. Mrs. Conklin and Elizabeth was with her. Mrs. Carman acted friendly and seemed the same when she came back. Dr. Carman was in good spirits. After lunch Dr. Carman went out. I didn't know any patients that were there and remember seeing one gentleman there. I saw no woman.

Dr. Carman came back. Doctor's hours are 8 a. m. to 9 a. m. and from 12:30 p. m. to 2 p. m.

After lunch I did not see any patients that I remember. Dr. Carman went out again and returned about 6:30 p. m. I did not see the doctor then until supper. Mrs. Carman, Dr. Carman, Mr. Conklin, Mrs. Conklin, Mrs. Powell and Elizabeth were at the table. I think we had fish for supper. Dr. Carman left room first, and I remember seeing Mrs. Carman leave table, and I think I got up at same time. Mrs. Carman told me to clear the table. I then saw and heard Mrs. Carman walk upstairs. The rest all went upstairs. I think meal was finished about 7:45 p. m. After that I cleared table and started washing dishes. It takes me about an hour to eat my supper, clear table, wash and dry dishes.

"HEARD A SHOT."

"I had eaten supper, cleared up dining room table and had washed dishes and was about through drying dishes when I heard a shot, and after Mrs. Carman and family left table I did not see any of them down stairs. I don't recollect having heard any one play piano, although it may have been played. Gilchaleh always runs through house all the time.

I was at sink in the kitchen and heard a shot. I went as far as pantry door and opened it and leaned against it. The door was not shut in my face. I heard no one in cellar and no one run through kitchen. I stayed in pantry about a minute or two and went back to sink in kitchen. I did not see anyone run through there. I don't remember of seeing anyone there in kitchen. I was frightened and did not work fast. In about a half hour I went in doctor's office, and when I went in office Dr. Carman and Mrs. Conklin were there and the woman was on floor. I stayed a minute and went back in kitchen and sat down a few minutes and went upstairs and to bed. My room is on second floor over kitchen.

I did not see Mrs. Carman any more after supper until I went to bed, and Mrs. Carman and Mrs. Conklin and Mrs. Powell were all in Mrs. Carman's room. I have never seen any revolver in the house and never saw Mrs. Carman ever have or use one. Both dining room doors were open and lighted up, and I did not see any one come in the house after the shot from any of those rooms until I came running around the house when the shot was fired. I did not hear any noise in the house plan after shot was fired.

Dr. Carman and Mrs. Carman were friendly and talked and joked. I have never heard the doctor or Mrs. Carman quarrel. I never knew anything about dictaphones, and did not know that any one ran from doctor's office up to Mrs. Carman's room. I have never been arrested and I have no idea who fired the shot. (Signed) CELIA (+) COLEMAN.

GEORGE M. LEVY,
Notary Public.
Nassau county, N. Y.

BARS "THIRD DEGREE."

District Attorney Smith today declared Celia Coleman would be one of his most important witnesses, adding: "The public and those who are working in Mrs. Carman's behalf can be sure of this. No attempt will be made to change the girl's story by unfair means and, no matter to what extent she changes her story, I will not take her before the Grand Jury unless I am convinced she is telling the truth."

The line of argument upon which the prosecution's new theory that the shot was fired from within the office, and that the slayer of Mrs. Bailey was not on the outside of Dr. Carman's office, is as follows:

In her room upstairs, Mrs. Carman, listening at the dictagraph, heard things in the office below which aroused her jealous rage. She hurried down the stairs, which lead by one turn to the front of the house and by the other to the pantry, which opens thence into the doctor's office.

Someone moved as quickly as Mrs. Carman, and with her sympathetically inclined. Instead of going out upon the porch and into the yard and breaking the glass, through which the shot was fired, the State will contend that Mrs. Carman took the other turn and rushed blindly through the pantry and into the office.

Either simultaneously or just before or just after the firing of the shot, the glass was broken. It is, of course, impossible to say definitely about this, unless some one confesses. But it is at this point that the new testimony of Celia Coleman, the colored maid, will enter.

THINKS WIFE GUILTY.

One of the points which has struck Mr. Smith most forcibly is that no outsider could have known that Mrs. Bailey and the doctor were in the office. Mrs. Bailey entered the anteroom of Dr. Carman just after 7.15 in the evening. Henry Debaut of Hempstead, who knew her well, saw her enter, and he is sure of the time. She had a wait of at least twenty minutes in the ante-room while another patient was being attended to.

So assuming that someone had followed Mrs. Bailey any length of time, with the purpose of killing her, and had watched her enter the house, the person would not have been able to determine whether Mrs. Bailey was in the office or not. The lace curtains were drawn and the shades were down. No one could see from the outside who was in the office.

And the screen, left unhooked so that it could be raised, shows that the person who fired the shot was familiar with the arrangements of the house. On this reasoning Mr. Smith has eliminated all theories pointing to outsiders, and he believes he has narrowed the case down to Mrs. Carman.

Dr. Carman is expected to be the last witness called before the Grand Jury, as the District Attorney hopes to present such a strong array of evidence that the doctor will feel compelled to tell the full story which, the District Attorney believes, Dr. Carman is now withholding.

District Attorney Smith declared today that, if the Grand Jury refuses to indict Mrs. Carman, he will ask another Grand Jury to indict her.

Howser was not seriously injured and was sent to his home.

Wilson and Senators in Accord on Jones

WASHINGTON, July 12.—President Wilson today stated to callers that he was in complete accord with the Democrats of the Senate so far as the confirmation of Thomas D. Jones as a member of the Federal Reserve Board is concerned. The President indicated that the majority side of the Senate had been canvassed and that with the exception of Senators Reed and Hitchcock the Democrats are pratically a unit behind him.

Call Prisoner an Expert at Fainting

Harry B. Fisher, who the police believe makes fainting a business, was charged with vagrancy today in Dedham court. He was held in $200 for a hearing Friday. Fisher, when picked up apparently unconscious yesterday, said he was starving. West Roxbury police say he is the man they found in a faint Saturday, but who was revived with a square meal at the City Hospital. A Norwood officer also revived him.

GOV. BREWER IS PUZZLING FIGURE IN DIVORCE CASE

NEW YORK, July 12.—Governor Earl Brewer of Mississippi has been revealed as a "man of mystery" in a divorce suit involving theatrical folk and an heir here.

Adele Blood, an actress, is suing her husband, Edward Davis, an actor and former minister. In an interlocking case, Davis is named in a suit by Frederick Esmelton Bryant against Dale Power.

Evidence has revealed that Ira Sample, intimate friend of Governor Brewer, prepared the evidence in each case and presented it to Adele Blood and to Mr. Bryant without being asked to do so by either. Referee Frederic C. Leubuscher thought this an strange that he asked Attorney Harry B. Bradbury, representing Miss Blood, how it happened. Mr. Bradbury replied that Ira Sample told him that he came into the case "because he was interested with the Governor of Mississippi and that Davis and the Governor of Mississippi had something together which made Davis a valuable man and made Sample a valuable man to the Governor of Mississippi," and that "he was investigating Davis for that reason."

Bradbury also told the referee that Sample had informed him Governor Brewer held a grudge against Davis and he (Sample) was out to square it.

Suffragists Turned Down by Democrats

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Democratic members of the House Rules Committee today again "turned down" the suffragists when they refused to meet them in the Capitol rotunda and hear a plea to call a special meeting to consider the suffrage resolution. ACCUSE GIRL OF FRAUD IN LIFE OF EASE

Miss Pearl Leslie, a refined, fashionably dressed girl of twenty-three, who lives in Portland, Me., was before Judge Hayden in the Roxbury Court today charged with fraud. She entered a plea of not guilty and her case was continued for a hearing in default of $200 bail she was committed to the Charles Street Jail. She has the bearing and appearance of a college girl.

The police declare that she has been cutting a swath in Boston and forgot to pay many bills. They say she has lived without money in fashionable Boston hotels and apartments houses and at Winthrop and that she has taken a course at Posse gymnasium.

She was arrested yesterday on complaint of Mrs. Helen L. Hill, proprietress of the Hotel Ranleigh, Mountford street, Back Bay.

The specific complaint was "obtaining food, entertainment and accommodations by fraudulent means." Mrs. Hill declares that Miss Leslie boarded and lodged at the Ranleigh six weeks and went away without setting.

The girl prisoner who caused a stir in the Roxbury Court today is of medium height and build and was tastefully gowned.

LET WOMEN PROPOSE, PLEA OF MRS. CHILD

"I do not believe that a young woman loses any of her modesty in timely proposing to a man," today declared Mrs. Richard Child, in discussing the statement of a Baltimore man that in 72 per cent. of the marriages he investigated, the woman proposed, or there was no proposal.

"This question of man proposing is quite insignificant beside the wonderful question of marriage itself. It would be absurd for a young couple to stand back and wait simply because the young man could not decide that he should not propose. Perhaps he might feel that he did not earn sufficient money with which to support a wife.

"On the other hand, the young woman who loved him dearly might quite properly suggest to him that she could get along on less money than he might think she needed.

"I believe the practice of proposing to be antiquated and that the majority of marriages today are without them.

There was absolutely no proposal between Mr. Child and myself. There was not even an engagement or a wedding—simply a marriage service."

Mrs. William Lowell Putnam said:

As to women proposing, different conditions may make it all right. There is no doubt that today there is a lot of proposing being done by women. It is not a natural state of affairs."

Dr. P. F. Brunick of South Boston declared:

"It may be true of women of advanced years making the first step, but she does so as a rule for cold personal or business reasons—the personal because she thinks it high time she had a companion—the business because she really needs a partner to look after her affairs. The latter comes under the head of a strictly commercial proposition."

Ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald said:

"I sure did propose to my wife and I had a hard time in getting her. I should say that the greatest number of marriages come through the proposing on the part of the man."

Edmund Trowbridge Dana, grandson of the poet Longfellow, observed:

"There was no proposal in my case. We simply admired each other and got married."

Professor Albert Bushnell Hart stated:

"I believe that proposals by women are very unusual. I would not say whether I proposed or not under any circumstances, because if I did I might be contradicted."

HUNT MISSING GIRL AND YOUTH IN NEW YORK

The New York police today joined in the hunt for Gladys Lewis, the seventeen-year-old Medford High School girl, and Arthur D. Jones, twenty, of Dorchester, who are reported missing from their homes.

John F. Lewis of No. 74 Marshall street, Medford, father of the girl, believes she is in New York. He declares Jones enticed his daughter away and he has enlisted the assistance of Chief Ewell of the Medford police in the hope of securing a warrant charging Jones with abduction.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis have not heard from their daughter since she left home and they are nearly prostrated from worry and grief. Several clews have been run down, but no trace of either Jones or the girl has been found. Mrs. Lewis today issued the following appeal to her daughter:

Gladys, dear, please come home.

You are breaking our hearts. I fear for your father if you don't write or come home soon. You are breaking both our hearts and you love us too dearly to do that knowingly. You are young and life is still before you. Come back to us and all will be forgiven.

We will make you happier than he ever can. We will sell our home and go to some other place to live. Come back, Gladys, before it is too late. I know you do not mean to grieve us and that you love us too much to allow us to suffer long as we are suffering now.

HEARST DISCUSSES CAMPAIGN THIS FALL AND THAT IN '16

Before leaving, Mr. Hearst granted an interview touching the political conditions of the country. He said:

"I think unquestionably there will be a Republican House, unless the activities of Mr. Roosevelt should be sufficient to divide the vote which will be registered in opposition to the administration. I haven't any doubt at all but that the Democrats will cast a small minority of the votes, but whether the Republicans will have a majority of the House depends on Mr. Roosevelt's course."

"Whether he advises continuing the third party?"

"I think it depends upon how actively he supports the third party. I consider Mr. Roosevelt a formidable force in American politics. If he exercises his full powers in support of the Progressive party, I do not think he can make it the winning party in this campaign, but I think he can perhaps prevent the Republican party from being the winning party."

"What do you think are the principal reasons for this coming defeat of the Democrats—this rebuke?"

"PARTY HAS FAILED."

"Well, I think it is mainly due to the fact that Mr. Wilson is not a Democrat—in spirit, I mean. I do not think he ever has been a Democrat, and I think at a time when the country wanted Democracy the Democratic party has failed to furnish Democratic government.

"The Democratic party has failed to live up to its platform.

"It has failed to provide the country with an adequate navy, although it had definitely declared in its platform that it would provide an adequate navy.

"It has failed to give American citizens protection in Mexico, although it definitely declared in its platform that it would protect American lives and property everywhere.

"It has failed to carry out its pledges, too, in regard to the Panama Canal. Its pledges were not only specific in its platform, but Mr. Wilson's personal pledges were specific.

"It has failed to give the country an economic administration. The budget threatens to be the biggest the country has ever had.

"The party has not lived up to its pledges; on the contrary, it has adopted policies which are not in accordance with its pledges and which are distinctly injurious to the nation and unpopular with the people of the country. Furthermore, I do not think the Democratic party has been Democratic in matters which were not definitely specified in the platform.

"Jefferson's tariff policy was a policy of reciprocity. Reciprocity has always been regarded as a Democratic policy, so much so that when President Taft put forward a semi-reciprocity program and the Democratic leaders in Congress were asked if they were going to support it, I remember them saying they certainly would do so, not because the policy put forward by Taft was a Republican policy, but because it was a Democratic policy.

"Yet when the Democratic party came into power in all branches of the government, it failed to pursue a policy of reciprocity; it reduces the tariff, it invites the products of foreign countries into our markets and it does not have the ordinary business sense to secure the markets of foreign countries for our own products through reciprocity agreements.

"Another policy which is regarded as Democratic is the policy of preferential duties. An act was passed by Congress in favor of preferential duties, but that act has been entirely set aside by the administration; it has been practically suppressed. An act of Congress has been nullified; a Democratic declaration defeated."

"You were quoted as speaking of a new alignment of parties; that progressive Democrats and other progressives might join in a new party?"

"I said that the opportunity of the Progressive party lay in that, not that it would likely occur.

"I think that it is one of the things that is possible to occur, but I don't know how likely it is to occur. I think there is sufficient dissatisfaction among Democratic voters to make such a combination possible, but I don't know that the Progressive party has as yet made any well defined effort to secure dissatisfied Democratic voters.

"I should think that a combination of progressive Democrats and progressive Republicans would be more likely to happen in 1916 than in the coming election, because I imagine Mr. Roosevelt will be the candidate of the Progressives in 1916 and I think Mr. Roosevelt is a very satisfactory candidate so many Democrats dissatisfied with the lack of Democracy in their own party."

"Do you think he will also be the Republican candidate?"

"I do not know. I think that he would get many Democratic votes, even if he were the candidate of a reconstructed Republican party."

"What is your idea of the dwindling away of the Progressive vote since 1912, as shown by recent primary elections?"

"I think this is due to the intense dissatisfaction among the voters with the misgovernment of the Democratic party and a feeling that the best weapon to use to defeat the Democratic party is the Republican party. I think the marked strength of the Progressive party in 1912 was due both to the popularity of Colonel Roosevelt and the general dissatisfaction of the Republican voters, especially the radical Republican voters, with the Republican party and the policy of President Taft.

"Today the dissatisfaction is with the Democratic party. The defection will be from the Democratic party, and the Republican party will probably win in the coming elections."

"Do you think we have made any progress for peace in Mexico through mediation or any other way? Is the situation any better now than it was two months ago?"

MEXICAN SITUATION.

"I think it is rather better just at present, not through the effects of mediation, but through the victories of the Constitutionalists, but I doubt if it will remain better. I think the Constitutionalists are likely to secure control of the government. They are likely to be completely successful in a military way and to take possession of the City of Mexico and establish a Constitutionalist government.

"But I believe there will be other revolutions when they have reached a point where they have control of affairs; they will have to elect a President, and the President elected will be unsatisfactory to a large element of the Constitutionalist body. Probably revolution after revolution will follow until the United States will have to pacify the country."

"Do you see any strong indication of a business revival or of an improvement in business? For instance, this proposed 5 per cent. increase asked by the railroads, will that help any, if granted?"

"I do not see how that will improve business. I think the business depression is due mainly to the tariff policy of the administration. As I have already said, I think we have deprived our own products of a part of our own markets by admitting the products of foreign countries. We have failed to secure any corresponding opportunity for our products in foreign markets.

"The markets for our products have been reduced, and, therefore, our products have been reduced. The wealth of the country depends upon its producing power, upon its creation of wealth. The reduction of our production has thrown a great many men out of employment. It has affected the manufacturer and the man that the manufacturer employs. It has diminished the demand for the raw material which the manufacturer buys, and has in turn affected the prosperity of those who produce or supply the raw material.

RAILROAD INCOMES.

"In regard to the railroad situation, I understood that an amazingly large proportion of the cars are not in use; that there is no demand for them. That is the main trouble with the railroads' income. If these cars are not in demand at the present rate of freight charges, I don't see how they are going to be in greater demand at higher rates.

"If people are not using them for transportation at a 100 per cent. rate, why should they use them more at a 105 per cent. rate? If business is depressed at the present rate of transportation, how is it going to be improved by having additional burdens upon it by increasing the cost of transportation?

"Railroad prosperity, like newspaper prosperity, is a barometer of general prosperity. If there were plenty of business there would be plenty of railroad transportation, and all the idle cars were full there would be plenty of railroad profits.

"What the country needs is an administration with enough practical sense and experience, with enough discrimination and judgment to protect the people against the extortion of illegitimate business methods but to encourage all legitimate business interests—to promotion of production instead of hampering it and to enlarge the markets for our products instead of contracting them."

Mr. and Mrs. Hearst are accompanied by a party of friends, which includes Mrs. Martin H. Glynn, wife of the Governor of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Guy Barham of Los Angeles, Miss Hazel Hiles and Miss Margaret Goodrich of New York and M. F. Ihmsen, general manager of the Los Angeles Examiner.

3 KILLED WHEN COLLIER SINKS BOSTON VESSEL

Survey of the collier Middlesex, which rammed and sunk the five-masted schooner George P. Hudson off Great Round Shoal, Vineyard Sound, causing the deaths of Captain George H. Thomas of Cambridge, James Cook and another unknown seaman, was begun by agents of Lloyds today.

Nine survivors of the Hudson were brought to port on the Middlesex when she was towed in by a tug.

These include A. H. Williams, mate of No. 8 Prospect street, Somerville; Fred Ashland, engineer; Edward J. LeClair of No. 25 Cushing avenue, Revere; Joseph Canacke, Edward Winfield, Thomas Tucker, Frank Jackson, Edward Lawrence and Manuel Travarse, all of Boston.

Engineer Ashland today declared he believes the auxiliary engine blew up when the crash came in the fog and that it was responsible for the large hole in the side and the rapid sinking.

"I was sleeping in the engine room about 10:30 o'clock Saturday night," he said, "and the first I knew I found myself hurled through the air in the middle of a lot of boards. I landed in a sail. There was a loud report and the escape of steam. I untangled myself from the sail and heard my fireman calling 'Chief.' I asked him what the trouble was.

"'My God, we've struck,' he said, 'we're sinking.'

"I ran up to the captain and waited back of him for orders. Then the two mates came along and told him the vessel wouldn't hold together five minutes. He asked if all the men were up. He refused to leave the ship."

The Middlesex had left Boston Saturday afternoon bound for Philadelphia. Fog was encountered almost immediately, and Captain Wilder ordered speed reduced.

BIGGEST CROWD EVER AT NANTASKET WITNESSES WEBSTER'S REMARKABLE FLIGHTS

AVIATOR IN SEAPLANE SHOWS THAT HE CAN SWIM AS WELL AS SOAR.

Clifford Webster, his Burgess-Dunne seaplane and the Boston AMERICAN prize tags proved such an alluring combination at Nantasket Beach yesterday afternoon that they drew to that popular amusement resort the biggest crowd in its history.

It was the greatest one-man aviation meet ever held in this part of the country. It was at once a flattering tribute to the achievements of Webster, to the amazing qualities of the hydro-aeroplane invented by W. Starling Burgess and Lieutenant J. B. Dunne and to the popularity of the AMERICAN'S plan of entertaining its thousands and thousands of readers in the open.

The air-and-sunshine feature of these prize-scattering aviation shows is one that recommends them strongly to all. It is a feature that insures health as well as clean, wholesome and educational recreation.

And to demonstrate the wonders of a ship of the air that can swim as handily as it can fly, no other helmsman could be found than the same "Cliff" Webster, star pilot for Burgess Company & Curtis, makers of the seaplanes at Marblehead.

They saw him drive his seaplane at a sixty-mile-an-hour clip through fog and a pelting rain. They saw him light on the waves with the grace and confidence of a gull, and leave them as handily.

WEBSTER TAKES RISKS.

The fleet-ness and absolute steadiness of the Burgess-Dunne seaplanes instantly impressed everyone. They commented on these features and were generous in their praise of young Webster and the arrow-head machine he manipulated so adroitly.

But what the concourse of admirers didn't know was how Webster got lost in a dense fog bank after leaving Marblehead; how he had to return to adjust a lighter propeller and how Greeley S. Curtis, and others hunted for him in a speedy launch and could locate him only by the hum of his motor.

What they didn't know also was that the young air pilot was so blinded by the mist, he drove miles with eyes closed and in the face of a treacherous south east wind.

"I'll make that trip from Marblehead to Nantasket and circle the tower of Paragon Park if I have to plunge through fog every inch of the way," said Webster, Saturday night, and he kept his word. What wonder then that he was a few hours later than he expected?

WEBSTER'S STORY.

Information by telephone from the Burgess plant was to the effect that Webster had been repeatedly delayed by fog banks, but that he had started out at 2:35 in spite of conditions that looked dubious. He wouldn't listen to postponement. He didn't want to disappoint the crowd, and, by the way, Cliff has much feeling for spectators. He likes to make it interesting for them. That was why he faced them when he alighted yesterday and rather than took the water so close to shore that the men in the AMERICAN launch thought he would dig clams with his pontoons.

After he circled over Marblehead in a gathering haze and soared south he was enveloped by a fog curtain [illegible] hitted out everything. Let [illegible] tell it in his own words:

"I couldn't see a thing. It was [illegible] I felt as if I was go[illegible] something, but I made for higher [illegible] I climbed above [illegible] I didn't know where I [illegible] The signs began to [illegible] my propeller and I circled and got my [illegible] was forced to go back [illegible] propellers. This took [illegible]

"I set out again, straight [illegible] and to the left of [illegible] light. There a heavy [illegible] and I plunged into [illegible] raindrops are anything [illegible] when they hit you [illegible] clip. They sting [illegible] I could hardly keep [illegible] I closed them [illegible] ay, but I got there [illegible] for the crowd's [illegible]

"It was no delay due to fog [illegible] the circle was not restless. They stood over it out, thousands of them [illegible] the showers. It was [illegible] speck, little larger [illegible] grew to the left of [illegible] a lead sky.

"A passing liner, [illegible] veered out over the bay and began to [illegible] the giant dragon fly. A quiver ran through the crowd. They poured down steps and jumped over [illegible] rallies and made a solid wall of human flesh close to the surf.

Launches and rowboats dotted the [illegible] with a green canoe ventured out, manned by two pretty girls in white muslin. The growing speck against the clouds began to look like the head of an arrow and then like the corner of a picture frame, and then the hum grew louder and soon [illegible] exactly like a country saw mill.

Webster had intended taking an assistant, but whatever conditions were unfavorable, he would go alone. To pilot a seaplane, rip off the hindlimbs on the bunches of prize vouchers and float them true was no easy or safe task.

EAGER FOR TAGS.

But he did it handily, tossing the Nantasket tags with both hands at times. Every flurry that landed was pounced upon. The crowd resembled flies hovering over a lump of sugar. It broke and clustered and scattered again. Many of the enterprising fat-hunters got into bathing suits and they scooped up quite a few in the water.

In favor the thousands that paid a visit to George Dodge, the genial manager of Paragon Park and its many attractions, Webster voiced that amusement industry several times and tossed hundreds of vouchers upon the heads of the surrounding [illegible] makers.

Then he lighted on the water, inspected his engine, made a second [illegible] and tag-dropping flight and for the last leg carried up Fred Livesey, one of the AMERICAN photographers. Fred flew once before, but he said the trip with Webster in that Burgess-Dunne 'chird' was the nearest thing to bliss he ever experienced. Fred wouldn't mind flying all the time, he said.

112 PRIZES COMING.

Before leaving the water with the camera man Webster drove his seaplane a couple of miles straight to sea and Dreamers' friends thought he was going to strike a march on Porto Rico in that trans-Atlantic flight.

Unfortunately, when Dreamer took the air it was to land a heavy downpour drove the crowd under cover. Thousands having procured their cards had hurried to the deposit boxes posted at the entrance to Paragon Park and the steamboat landing. These boxes saved them the trouble of mailing their cards to the AMERICAN, but those who failed to can send them through the mails.

Each tag had a space for the finder to write a slogan appropriate to the Boston AMERICAN in from three to five words. In all 112 prizes are to be awarded for the best slogans, [illegible] for the cleverest slogan. The next [illegible] two second best, twenty-seven [illegible] twenty $2.50 and seventy $1 prizes.

Paragon Park was a busy place for thousands. Manager Dodge's famous [illegible] room was packed, and the talented artists who gave the nightly and outdoor shows delighted crowds [illegible] and evening. The Midway was humming. There was a bang-up band concert, and the outdoor features, which are to be repeated every afternoon and evening this week, were thrillers. Grand opera, comedy and high-class vaudeville acts make up the bill. Equilla, the "human spider," does some balancing stunts [illegible] ball of the tower, and Steeplejack John is a hair-raiser.

To-morrow and the trustees for the day's excursion of the Nantasket Steamboat Company should get its share. The officials had most of this company and support service.

The whole fleet of quick and spanking boats was manned with service. Special time had to be made, but there was not a slump or delay.

By JACK CONWAY

THE New England lightweight championship will be thrown into the ring again at the Atlas A. A. tomorrow night. Gilbert Gallant, the titleholder, will defend his laurels against Matty Baldwin, who held the championship until he was beaten by Eddie Murphy last Summer. Gallant then came along and conquered Murphy.

Baldwin believes he will regain his lost laurels. There is an old adage which says that they never come back, but this cannot very well be applied in Matty's case, as he did not lose to Murphy until after a thrilling battle, and, what is more, he has been fighting at a merry clip of late.

Freddy Welsh is the original comeback kid, and Baldwin does not believes that Welsh has anything on him. Welsh lost the English lightweight championship to Matt Wells in London, in February, 1911, but came back and won from Wells in November, 1912.

And, in order to prove that he is a regular, big league fighter, Welsh handed it to friend Willie Ritchie over in London last week.

WELSH'S remarkable ring generalship has been a big factor in his ring triumphs. The writer, however, does not believe that the new world's champion knows any more about the fine points of the ring game than Baldwin. Welsh himself will tell you that Matty is one of the brainiest fighters in the business and he is in a position to know, whereas he speaks, as Baldwin gave him one of the hardest battles of his career in San Francisco in 1911. The men fought twenty sensational rounds and when the contest ended Welsh was given a hair-line decision.

BALDWIN and Gallant fought a year ago and at that time Matty was awarded the decision. After the contest, Gallant's supporters argued that he should have received at least a draw. Baldwin admits that he only had a slight advantage in the fighting in their last encounter, but he attributes this to the fact that he was not able to show at his best. He is now in perfect condition and expects to win by a decisive margin, if he is defeated, he will not have any excuse to offer.

GALLANT completed his training at Chester, today. He is ready to box 135 pounds, the weight the boys have agreed to make for the contest, and engaged in only a little workout today. Gallant is boxing much faster than he was when he last clashed with Baldwin. His recent campaign on the Pacific Coast enabled him to learn many valuable things about the ring game and he will be a vastly improved boxer when he meets Baldwin at the Atlas.

THERE should not be many dull moments throughout the bout, as both boys are aggressive boxers and delight in fighting at close quarters. Baldwin is the better ring general of the two, but Gallant is young, strong and ambitious. These qualities have been known to triumph where experience and generalship failed, as Alex McLean. Baldwin's former manager, will second Gallant, and if Matty has any weaknesses it is unknown to any of them. Alex should be of tremendous aid to the Chelsea boy throughout the bout, and if Gallant's efforts are crowned with success McLean will deserve a great part of the credit.

EDDIE FLYNN of Lynn and Walter Butler, who hails from Beachmont, are booked to clash in the semi-final bout of eight rounds. They boys recently met at Cambridge and put up a slashing affair. There will also be two preliminary bouts.

"PORKY" FLYNN, the West End heavyweight, writes us that it was Battling Levinsky who called off their bout which was scheduled to be decided in New York last Saturday night. Flynn states that Levinsky is suffering from boils and requested that the contest be postponed until a later date. Flynn adds that he recently injured one of his ankles, but that he was nevertheless in good enough condition to clash with Danny Morgan's seven-day fighter.

CABLE dispatches received in this city from London inform us that a $75,000 house is expected for the Carpentier-Smith twenty-round fight, which will be staged in London Tuesday night. Far be it from us to consider these reports lightly, but we have an idea that the promoters of the contest will be perfectly satisfied if they take in $45,000 at the gate. The promoters of the recent bout between Welsh and Ritchie stated that they would have a $125,000 house, but when they counted the money which was paid for admissions there discovered that the contest drew about $100,000 less than they claimed it would.

THESE reports are usually sent out for advertising purposes. When boxers are supposed to be receiving fabulous purses and a record breaking crowd is expected to turn out in order to see the battle, the average human gets the fight fever and he will place his wife's diamonds in pawn in order to secure the price of admission.

RITCHIE was the only person who at profited a great deal as a result of the recent championship encounter. He received a flat guarantee of $15,000, while he sold his moving pictures interests to the promoters for $10,000 more. He also received $4,000 for various expenses. This money was deposited in New York with Billy Gibson before Ritchie entered the ring with Welsh.

NEW EXPERT ON VANITIE TELLS OF RACE PLANS

By HARRY C. THOMAS.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 13.—The fourth race for the three cup class boats, Vanitie, Resolute and Defiance, starts today off Brenton's Reef lightship over a thirty mile course.

The indications are that the day will be one of the best for weather conditions that the three boats have had. The fog has blown away and a sharp thunder squall cleared the air with indications for a breeze.

Yesterday afternoon the Resolute and Vanitie were taken out for a running up, both wearing new mainsails that drew well, although just best during the day.

The Vanitie also has a new steel gaff foresail, heavier than the old one, and has been put on to lessen the weight aloft with a hope to increase her speed.

The boats were given some ten miles of windward work Sunday and the sea had no hills in it. The Vanitie footed fast, but the two boats were tied in company any length of time, so that no comparison of the effect of the new sails could be gained.

Captain Dick Sherlock, commander of the steam yacht Mohican, under charter to Alexander S. Cochran, owner of the Vanitie, will from now out be aboard the Cochran racing craft. He will act as navigator and it was his skill in this line Saturday that brought the Vanitie home a winner.

The Vanitie has a patent log aboard that came from some other ship and had never been regulated to the Vanitie. It would run too true or anywhere near it, and it was Sherlock who fixed it.

Captain Sherlock is a little grayed veteran racing man from Boston, and he had this to say about the Vanitie:

When Mr. Cochran asked me to go aboard the Vanitie and help Harry Haff, the skipper, as navigator, I found that this log would not work and set about to fix it, last Friday night. I didn't get it fixed exactly but I improved it so that on its first test it came nearly true.

In the dense fog when we turned the first mark and went for the finish, I had my course reckoning for the tide and gave it to Haff with these words, "Don't say, give me a point, Haff, and we will cut the mark."

PATENT LOG REGULATES.

E. D. Morgan, who was aboard the Columbia in all her races, was on board the Vanitie and kept telling Haff to change his course a little or she wouldn't make the mark. I had to keep after these two men and have them stick to the course that I had laid.

We nearly run the mark down. We came home under spinnaker and were right at the mark end of the line.

As we finished we didn't know we were the first over until the men on the press boat told us, as the Resolute was leading when we last saw her.

After the finish Mr. Cochran and Mr. Morgan told me I had done the trick and told me to stay on the boat.

In speaking of the Vanitie's rig and some of the criticisms made by Captain Bill Dennis, former skipper of the yacht, Captain Sherlock had this to say:

SAWS DENNIS WAS RIGHT.

The rigging in a number of places is far too heavy and I have told Mr. Cochran so. It will be fixed. I have noticed a number of little things that should have been changed, but Designer Gardner wouldn't change them, but they will now all be remedied.

Dennis was right in many instances. I think, however, the Vanitie was trimmed too far by the stern, but that was Dennis' idea. Haff and I will change it.

When the Vanitie gets all of these changes, she, in my opinion, will beat the Resolute as many times as the Resolute has beaten her. When the August trials come, she ought to be in her best form.

The Vanitie is the strongest built boat that I was ever in. She is fast lined, too.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. G. MITCHELL

IN all probability two of the Boston players who have been on the injured list will be able to resume business at the old stand today. Lewis, who has been out of the game because of a bad finger, which, while it did not hinder him from throwing the ball, prevented him from taking a good grasp of the bat, will likely be seen in left field. He played an inning or so out in the garden on Saturday and felt all right.

Harry Hooper, who has been out of the game since Wednesday when he crashed with Speaker going after a line drive, and was put out of commission, said today that he hoped he could work this afternoon. With the Red Sox outfield back on a war basis, the men under Carrigan can set sail for the pennant once more. Wood ought to be in shape soon, but there are yet some days to pass before Foster can pitch again. The injured knee has been slower to come around than was anticipated.

* * *

The combined height of the three new players from Baltimore-Ruth, Shore and Agnew—is 16 feet 8 inches. Shore is the tallest of the trio, being 6 feet 4 inches.

THE Athletics work every legitimate trick known to baseball to win games. In the recent double-header between the Tigers and Mackmen, Sam Crawford hit a homer over the fence in one stage of the proceedings. George Moriarty, who was coaching at third, shook Crawford's hand in congratulation as Sam trotted past the bag. Captain Ira Thomas of the Athletics promptly claimed that Crawford was out under the new rules that prohibits a coacher from touching a base runner, but Umpire Chill declined to call Crawford out, because the ball had been batted outside the grounds and was not in play. This is the first time such a point has been raised under the conditions that prevailed.

* * *

HERE is what a Western writer says about the Red Sox: "The Red Sox are the puzzle of the American League. Carrigan has a good fielding team and a splendid pitching staff. But Boston is not winning. Until gains the way it should win them. On paper Boston looked even better than Philadelphia because it has a better outfield, a fair superior pitching staff and its infield could not be called weak by any means."

* * *

J. ED. GRILLO, of Washington, who is a particularly well-informed baseball writer, says:

"Marsans, the Cuban outfielder who jumped the Cincinnati club and signed up with the St. Louis Feds, has already cost that club $8,000, though he is unable to play with it. Marsans signed a three-year contract, calling for $15,000, and the inducement which caused him to accept was that half of this amount was paid him spot cash when he affixed his signature.

"Then the courts enjoined Marsans from playing, and the injunction has been made permanent. The St. Louis club is out the $8,000 it paid Marsans, and the chances are that this will prove a lesson for other Federal League clubs, and that raiding of organized ball clubs will be postponed if not abandoned entirely.

"The amount of money that the new league promoters have already sunk in the venture must be enormous. Granting that there are men of means behind the league, it is only a question of time when they will realize that the chances for their ever recovering these investments are but slim, and then there will be a hurrying to get under cover.

"The effect of these court decisions which prevent players who jump from playing is sure to put a stop to the jumping of players, for it looms the Federal League clubs will refuse to give up their coin without having assurance of the players' services, and the players, too, will hesitate about putting themselves out of baseball for such sums as they could get in advance on their Federal League contracts."

Johnston Forced to Bow to Williams

NEW YORK, July 13.—In a hard-fought three-set battle, Dr. Norris Williams, 2d, beat William M. Johnston by the score of 6—6, 9—7, 6—4 in the final of the Davis Cup test tournament on the courts of the Country Club of Westchester. Johnston, the California boy, suffered from the heat, and it took much of the snap from his game. As it was, he scored more points than Williams, second string player of last year's Davis Cup team, as the respective totals stood at 122 to 118.

R. Lindley Murphy has also been suffering from the heat. He fainted at the end of his match against Johnston the other day after reaching the dressing room.

27 Motorists Finish in 500-Mile Race

WORCESTER, July 13.—Twenty-seven out of sixty-four starters finished in the third annual 500-mile run of the Worcester Motor Club.

John Livingstone of Worcester won the race, H. F. Drake of Boston second, Kendall Saunders of Worcester third and J. C. Loftus of Providence fourth.

The course over which the riders in teams, side cars and singles went was from Worcester to Springfield via New Haven to Stamford to the Bronx, to Yonkers, to Poughkeepsie, to Albany and back to Worcester.

BIKERS TO HOLD PUTOVER MEET TUESDAY NIGHT

The four-cornered thirty-mile motor-paced race between Bobby Walthour, Clarence Carman, Jimmy Moran and Worth Mitten, a tandem race between the teams of Logan-McFarland and Connolly-Rollins, a match sprint race between Mike the Barber and Silvio Pecci and the regular list of professional and amateur events, which were postponed Saturday night on account of the rain will be run off at the Revere Cycle Track tomorrow night.

The rain checks distributed among those present on Saturday night are good for tomorrow night only.

The shower which spoiled the racing came as a big disappointment to the fans. All were anxious to see Walthour in action, and many were out to witness their first big tandem race. However, the riders will benefit by the rest, and the racing tomorrow night should be all the faster.

Walthour is in great shape and ready to show the Revere "fans" the speed which carried him to victories over Leon Didier, the French champion, at both long and short distances. The Georgian is one of the great "comebacks" of the bike game, and with three-paced records already to his credit this Spring, he will surely make a great bid for the middle distance championship.

With three such riders as Moran, Carman and Mitten pushing him in tomorrow night's race, it would not be surprising to see the distance covered in close to record time. This race will mark Mitten's first appearance at the Beach oval this season. He returned recently from a successful tour of Germany and France, where he met and defeated the best paced men of these countries.

No International Henley Regatta

NEW YORK, July 13.—That there is no chance of making the English Henley regatta an international affair in the sense that the polo and tennis contests are international is shown by the recent decision of the regatta committee.

The Australian oarsmen asked permission to start an all-Australian eight in the event this year which was won by the Harvard crew. In refusing the request the secretary of the regatta replied in part:

"My committee, after careful examination, are of the opinion that under the rules this would be impossible.

BETWEEN THE ROUNDS

By RINGSIDE

AL MORTON INTENDS TO HAVE another strong "card" at the University club in Cambridge Friday evening. Last week's show was a good one and the "fans" showed their appreciation of the line work of the various boxers.

SUBSTITUTIONS AT THE ELEVENTH hour have played havoc with many of the shows of the Cambridge organization. There were no substitutions last week, and this was one of the reasons why the bouts were so even.

TOMMY SHEA, THE NEW HAVEN BANtamweight, made a fine showing against Tommy Flanagan of Cambridge at the University club, and will probably be seen in action at the local club again within a few weeks. There were many "fans" who were of the opinion that Shea had the best of the boxing and that he should have been awarded the decision instead of being given a draw.

ALEX McLEAN, MANAGER OF GILBERT Gallant, believes that Willie Ritchie would still be the world's lightweight champion if he had remained out of the ring following Packey McFarland's defeat. Ritchie insisted on his opponent making the 133-pound limit, but he did not show as well in his encounters within the hemp ropes.

WELSH WILL PROBABLY NOT ENGAGE in an important bout for a year. He has been offered scores of theatrical dates and will probably make a tour of Europe and the United States.

IF WELSH FIGHTS RITCHIE AGAIN, THE contest will probably be staged in Vernon, Cal. Welsh is a big favorite in California, and if he were to clash with Ritchie on the Coast the contest would draw a great deal more money than the box office than it would if held on English soil.

JACK JOHNSON IS HAVING A MERRY time these days at the expense of the promoters of the old World. The negro is perfectly willing to fight, but his terms are prohibitive.

LONDON PROMOTERS ARE STILL TRYing to arrange a match between Johnson and Langford. They are willing to give Johnson $50,000 for his end of the purse, but they positively would not give Langford more than $6,000, as English boxing "fans" refuse to pay fancy prices in order to see ring contests.

FRANK MORAN, THE PITTSBURGH "white hope," may battle Bombardier Wells within a few months. Here's a fine chance for Bill Brady to pick a winner and get away with it, as Wells has yet to box a good ring rater.

AND THEY INFORM US THAT THE ENGlish promoters are willing to fork up a $25,000 purse for Morgan and Wells. All of which goes to prove that John D. does not own the only paying business proposition in the world.

Old Timers to Have Permanent Society

The "old timer" athletes are feeling like a lot of three-year olds today following their first great outing at John O'Brien's Sunset farm, Hollliston, yesterday.

The sports included a ball game, and a fifty-yard dash between Piper Donovan and Arthur Duffy, which the latter won by a scant three yards.

A permanent organization was formed in view of the great success of the affair, and it will be called the Old-Time Athletes' Association. It was decided to have another outing in the Fall.

R. B. Osthues was elected president; Arthur F. Duffy, vice president; Edward I. McGrath, secretary, and George V. Brown, treasurer. Directors were also chosen.

CARPENTIER IS MADE FAVORITE OVER SMITH IN 'BATTLE FOR TITLE'

Special Cable to Boston Americans.

LONDON, July 13.—Every available billboard in and for twenty-five miles around London is proclaiming today that next Thursday's fight between "Gunboat" Smith and Georges Carpentier at the Olympia is "for the heavyweight championship of the world," and, considering this fact, the advance sale of seats already amounts to over $50,000.

This ignoring of Jack Johnson is perhaps excusable. Certainly no real contest for the heavyweight championship ever aroused greater anticipatory interest than does this one—wherein neither contestant is an Englishman.

Nobody pretends that either Smith or Carpentier has a chance against Johnson; only the uninformed rank either man as comparable with other great fighters of the past.

CARPENTIER THE FAVORITE.

Sentiment among the majority of Americans and all Englishmen favors the Frenchman, who will undoubtedly be an odds-on favorite at the ringside. The London dailies carry long accounts from both training camps, most of them having special correspondents living with Carpentier at Manitot, France, as well as with Smith here.

According to his manager, Des Campes, the Frenchman weighs today four pounds more than when he knocked out Bombardier Wells. Experts who have watched Smith work out feel that, while he is big enough to beat Carpentier, they doubt that he is good enough.

SMITH NOT OVERCONFIDENT.

The American has made many friends and his gymnasium work has shown more cleverness than was expected. His record proves he is one of the hardest hitters in the business. But the general impression is that he must knock out Carpentier to win.

One thing is certain—Smith won't be beaten by overconfidence, as he doesn't underestimate his opponent's prowess in the least.

CARDS LOSE ALL HOPE AS BRAVES SHOW OLD FORM

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 13.—For a ball-and ball club the Braves appear to be a winner. In fact, if they continue their present pace they'll turn the subway spot over to some one else.

George Stallings has his entry playing real snappy ball out in the West, the pitchers have recovered their stride and it would not be a big surprising to see the Braves return home at the top of the second division.

With Cincinnati losing and the Braves administering a 12 to 5 licking to the Cardinals, in their opening clash, the Braves are but four games behind Cincinnati in fifth place and now only five and one-half games to the rear of the Cardinals, third, so the difference is not such a big one that Stallings cannot take a big jump if the Braves continue to win.

Although the Braves lose to other teams in the league, they usually lick the Cardinals. For instance, last season the Braves compiled their best record against the Cardinals, when they won sixteen out of the twenty-two games.

That's why they finished fifth and the St. Louis eighth. Then this year the Braves have won five games out of eight from Huggins.

Until the Braves arrived the St. Louis fans were sighting the pennant for the Cardinals. That's a fact. They had won three out of four from the Giants and were not very far behind McGraw.

Losing the opener to the Braves and with three more to play here has changed conditions completely.

The Braves were off to a slow start this year. The pitching staff was not in the best form, Stallings had difficulty getting a creditable outfield and infield, but now he has the team going along smoothly.

Stallings is equipped with utility material in case of injuries. He had to line up without Rabbit Maranville yesterday. The midget shortstop received word that his brother died at home, and although Stallings told the Rabbit to pack up and go home, he refused. He just remained out of the contest, did not report to the park, but will return to his post tomorrow.

For the second game today Hess and Griner probably will pitch.

SOX CRIPPLES MAY RETURN TO LINE-UP TODAY

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

With Hooper and Lewis back in the game today, which seems likely, the Red Sox will be in better shape to continue their fight for the flag. They are very few points behind the teams that are leading them and on the results of Saturday's games gained on them.

The Cleveland team, while in last place is still a dangerous proposition and with such sluggers as Jackson, Lajoie and Jay Kirke on hand they are liable to break up a game at any minute.

Carrigan is beginning to feel more confident now that some of his cripples are ready to work again. The addition of the three Baltimore stars helps a lot too. George Ruth acquitted himself well in Saturday's game. He did not show any great amount of stuff, however, but this is easily accounted for when it is remembered that he only arrived in town Saturday morning and was forced to pitch in strange surroundings his first big league game that afternoon.

There are no double-headers to be worked off while the Cleveland team is here, so Carrigan can make his plans with his crippled pitching staff much better than as though there were to be two games a day.

Kramer's Victory Protested by Fans

NEWARK, N. J., July 13.—"As illegal bit of teaming" by Frank L. Kramer and Frank Cavanaugh, when the former won the open race, aroused the ire of the crowd at the Velodrome.

Walter Rutt of Germany and Joe Fogler of Brooklyn made spirited protests, but the referee ignored them.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

YOU HAVE WAITED TOO LONG

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-five and have been keeping company with a young man four years my senior for six years.

We have been engaged three years and he is urging me to marry him. I love him better than any one else and I know he loves me, but he lives with a sister who has an invalid husband, and I think he expects me to live with her. He gets $35 a month and I get $50, and I am the last daughter left at home.

INDECISION.

IT would indicate a greater spirit of fairness to the man if you had settled this point before your engagement was three years old.

If you love each other, a love that has stood a long test, you will never be happy if you do not marry him; and when a man and wife love each other all problems of relatives settle themselves.

WHO WAS IN THE WRONG?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and in love with a man two months my senior. I went with him, but we had a quarrel over a mere trifle. He loves me still, as he writes me letters, still he won't speak, as he is too stubborn to speak first, and so am I. I love him very much, and now he is keeping company with a girl friend of mine. I know he doesn't love this other girl as much as he loves me.

BROKEN-HEARTED.

IF you were in the wrong, write him to that effect. If he was, and is transferring his attentions to another girl rather than confess it and "make up" with you, believe me, he is too stubborn to make any girl a good husband.

THAT DEPENDS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man of twenty-five and have a good position. I met a young lady of about twenty-three at a fruit store. This young lady is one of the sweetest I ever met. She has dark eyes and is very loving. I asked her to go to a show. She smiled and told me she had more love for the people than for a show.

Please tell me did I do right or wrong, as I love her with all my heart. LOVER.

IF you had been properly introduced there was no impropriety in your invitation.

Plainly, however, she is too serious minded to care for the popular amusements.

SUPPOSE YOU PROPOSE?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-one and am deeply in love with a girl of eighteen, with whom I have kept company for almost a year. Last Sunday evening she asked me if I knew it was almost a year that I had been keeping company with her. I said, yes. She said that at the end of the year she could tell me whether I loved her or not. Now, how can she tell? Are there any presents to be given?

ANXIOUS.

ONE may only guess what is in her mind, but it is my opinion she has decided it is time for you to propose if you love her. Suppose you offer to make her a gift of yourself?

TELL HER THE TRUTH

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty, and have been keeping company with a girl two years older for the last four years. I loved this girl very much for the first three years, and now my love is growing colder toward her all the time, and my salary is small and I must give my parents part of it, because they are poor and old. So I ask you for your advice about this girl and what I should tell her and what excuse.

GEORGE.

YOUR letter is proof of the tragedy a long engagement always brings to the girl.

If you do not love her, of course you must not marry her. So tell her what you have told me, and be sure you never do such an injustice to another girl.

Do You Know That—

It is claimed for Thomas Blades, of Yarwell, a Northamptonshire village, England, that he is the oldest Odd Fellow in the world. Blades, who is within two years of being a centenarian, has just completed seventy-four years' membership of the Manchester Unity. As a boy of seven he was working for 1s. 6d. a week in minding cows and scaring birds from crops. He is hale and hearty, enjoys his pipe and believes that the secret of keeping young is "a contented mind and something in it."

Russia has 464½ million acres of forest. That is to say, more than one-third of the whole country is covered by trees; and there is four acres of forest to every inhabitant.

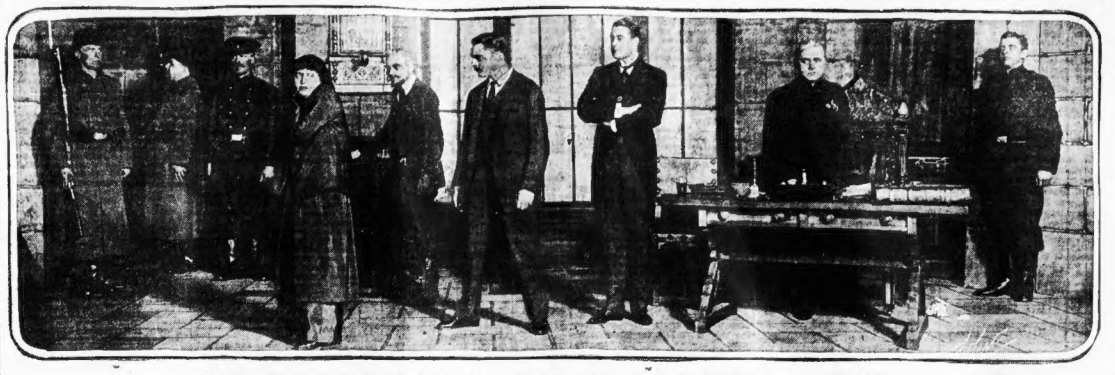
One of the Most Sensational Stories Ever Written

THE YELLOW TICKET

Russia's Persecution of the Jews Fully Exposed



The dramatic scene in the Russian secret service office when Rolfe, the American journalist, tries to save Marya.

Adapted from the play presented by A. H. Woods at the Eltinge Theatre, New York City, and written by Michael Morton.

(Novelized)

By A. A. WATERBURY

"Oh, I say, look here! You can't condemn me to Siberia because a man died of appendicitis," protested Rolfe.

"Monsieur Zoubatoff, you are going too far—you are acting against the wishes of some of the most powerful of—" began Nikolai Rostov.

"The Okrana bows to no power in Russia," returned Zoubatoff.

"But you are dealing with America. They have already torn up one treaty—"

Rolfe amended that. "And when she begins tearing up, you don't know where she'll stop."

THE TELEPHONE

Again there was that suggestive tinkling of a bell. When Alexander Graham Bell perfected the ideas of the German Reiss and developed his own greater and more far-reaching theories, he gave to copper wire the most miraculous power of conserving human life—and of taking it. For over the circuit of the telephone tragedy has winged its way and joy has flown, and life and death and love and hate travel in the wave movement of the molecules of wire.

"The American Embassy, again Excellency," announced Pasino.

"Well, what do they want?" growled the Russian bear.

"The Ambassador wishes to speak to Monsieur Zoubatoff."

Zoubatoff took up his own phone with evident distaste and evident determination that he would bow to necessity only in so far as he was forced.

As the three men in his office watched him they saw strange emotions sitting across Zoubatoff's face and strange changes of expression marking the effect of what the American Ambassador was saying over that wire of portent.

"Yes. It is Monsieur Zoubatoff. Yes, yes, it is a great loss—Baron Andrey cannot be replaced. Thanks for the condolence, your excellency. Yes, Mr. Rolfe is here. You have an appointment with him? WHAT! HE! You amaze me. No, no, your excellency, Mr. Rolfe is just leaving. Good-bye!"

Zoubatoff turned from the phone and fixed blazing eyes of hatred on Rolfe, and then he spoke words that strangely contradicted his manner of enmity.

"Pavlac, cancel the order for Mr. Rolfe's commitment. Mr. Rolfe, you will make it your business to leave Russia tonight."

"And Miss Mirrel?" asked Rolfe.

"You may go," said Zoubatoff in a tone of finality.

But it was not final to Julian Rolfe.

"It is that girl's life you have in Andrey's reputation—which means the most to you, Monsieur Zoubatoff."

"BRING IN THE GIRL"

The men measured each other for a moment with mutual dislike in their eyes.

"Bring in the girl," said Zoubatoff after a moment or two.

Pavlac went out of the barred door that led to the secret rows of cells.

"My uncle's honor is in your hands," said Nikolai Rostov to the Okrana's present chief. "Think of that tomorrow when you stand at the bier of your dead chief."

"I am thinking of him," and there was a sob in Zoubatoff's voice. "I am thinking of the man who stood for what I am standing for now—to keep down this accursed race that is trying to master us."

Deeply chiming its slow toll from far away rang a mellow toned bell. The Russians bowed their heads.

"It is the mass for the repose of Baron Andrey's soul," said Nikolai Rostov.

Zoubatoff's head sunk lower upon his breast and then it jerked up to its customary poise of dauntless cruelty and faith to duty as his fanatic soul saw to do its duty. For staggering across the threshold came the pale-faced, hunted creature that had been a vibrant girl of twenty-two the day before Anna Mirrel staggered into the room with the set look on her face that many women have worn since the Marchioinesses of France went to the guillotine bravely with a jeering rabble waiting for their impassivity to break. But the Russian Jewess was conscious of no pose or effort—she was too numb from suffering to feel anything more yet.

"Listen, girl!" said Zoubatoff. "With the strict understanding that you forget that you ever met Baron Andrey, we have decided to let you go free."

Anna staggered a step forward and raised her nerveless hand to her white throat. But no glimmer of understanding or relief came to her haggard eyes.

FREE

"Don't you understand—you're to leave Russia—you're free!" cried Rolfe. "You're free!"

"Free"—the girl's hand fumbled in the bosom of her blouse and she drew out the cause of all her misery—the yellow ticket—and held it out.

Julian Rolfe came and caught her in his arms and steadied her with his strength. The ticket fluttered unnoticed to the ground. Pavlac picked it up and handed it to Zoubatoff. The chief took it and looked coldly at the girl who had carried it hidden for many years. Then he tore it slowly into bits.

"Anna Mirrel, we will furnish you with another passport to cross the frontier," said the chief.

But still the girl in Rolfe's grasp stood silent and impassive as if she were no part of all that was going on about her.

"And you are going to America—with me—with me at last, dear," whispered her lover.

And then a little shudder of waking passed through Anna Mirrel's frame and her hand stole almost as if frightened across Rolfe's dark hair.

"I feel as if I had been reborn," she murmured. And even then some of the horror was fading from her eyes as she felt the warm sweet sanity of the man who loved her restoring some of her own joy of living. She knew that some day she would forget all the pains and terrors.

"You are coming with me, are you not, dear?" whispered her lover. And never had wooing been aped in stronger place than his confession of love that was daring in its way to life in the grim office of the grimmer Okrana.

"Yes—I am going—with you," promised Anna Mirrel. That was her confession of faith.

"One moment, Mr. Rolfe, I forbid you ever to enter Russian territory again," ordered Zoubatoff.

Rolfe turned in amazement. "What?"

"Because, Mr. Rolfe—I have just been informed that you are—a Jew," said the hater of Jews.

"Well, I never said I wasn't," smiled Julian Rolfe.

And the heavy door of the Okrana opened to permit Anna Mirrel to enter a new world at the side of the man she loved.

THE END

The Chapeau Chic

By OLIVETTE

THE craze for small hats seems undiminished. White is favored above all colors, and to the woman of clear coloring it is most becoming.

The little white satin toque, as shown on the left, with a breast wound round its edge, seems to be the reigning favorite. In many cases they are untrimmed, but this model has a high trimming of two high quills. They are wound in white satin and their base is a wee bow of the satin.

Brimmed like an Englishman's derby and crowned almost like his dress hat is this sugar white hat that is sponsored by a pretty young Parisian actress.

The trimming on this small shape of white crin is as marked for daring as the hat itself is noticeable for severity of outline. It is garnished by tufts of white aigrettes, the foot of each of which is hidden by a small pump bow of white velvet. Wheat, paradise or ostrich quills may be substituted for the aigrettes, which are taboo in this country, greatly to the satisfaction of every bird lover.—OLIVETTE.

Little Mary's Essays

By DOROTHY DIX

(HUSBANDS)

HUSBANDS is the people that your Mama marries, and she always wishes that she hadn't picked out the one she did, but I don't know why, because Husbands all look alike to me.

My Mama says that Husbands is like the things that you buy on the bargain table. They look fine and grand so that you feel like you'll die if you don't get the one that you have set your eyes on, and you fight with another woman for it and are ready to pull her hair and scratch her face to get it, but after you get it and take it home with you, it looks like thirty cents, and you spend your life wondering what made you fool enough to want it.

Husbands is very kind and polite to strange women, and they laugh themselves most to death when they try, slim young ladies tell jokes, but when their wives are forty years old and has gotten fat Husbands is grouchy, and when their wives tells a funny story, all they say is "Huh!"

I guess Husbands is the smartest people in the world, and knows the most, because they sit up all the evening and read the paper and never waste any time talking to their wives.

I guess Husband is a kind of fish because I heard some ladies say that Miss Susie Jones was fishing for Mr. Brown, but they didn't believe that she'd ever hook him, and when I asked my Papa what that meant he said that it meant that men were suckers, and that if they weren't none of them would ever get married.

There used to be a great many Husbands, and you could go out and catch one just as easy as you could go out and kill a buffalo for breakfast, but every year they get fewer and fewer, and they don't roam the plain any more, and soon there won't be any more buffaloes and husbands left except those in captivity.

My Mama says that there is no other wild animal that is so hard to tame as a Husband and even after you've had bubbles on one for forty years he is liable to break loose and jump over the fence.

Husband is lots of trouble, but all the young ladies is trying to catch one, and all the ladies with three chins that shake when they talk is trying to keep the ones that they have got.

Most ladies is only got one Husband, but the ladies that have traveled and been as far West as Reno, or over to Paris, sometimes has a collection of Husbands.

There are two kinds of Husbands. A good Husband is a man who gives you plenty of money to go shopping with, and goes down town to work every morning at 8 o'clock, and doesn't come home until 5, and a Husband that is a mean old thing is one that makes his wife buy things on a bill, so he can see how she spent the money, and who goes snooping around the kitchen seeing how thick the cook pared the potato perlings, and who stays at home all day.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

"I am thinking of touring in South Africa next season," remarked the comedian.

"Take my advice and don't" replied the villain. "An ostrich egg weighs from two to three pounds.

* * *

He was one of those fresh young fellows, given to the use of stale slang. At the breakfast table, desiring the milk, he exclaimed:

"Chase the cow down this way, please."

"Here, Jane," said the landlady. "take the cow down to where the calf is bawling."

* * *

"Yes," said the cynical old sea captain, "when I was shipwrecked in South America I came across a tribe of wild women who had no tongues."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed a listener. "How could they talk?"

"They couldn't," was the reply. "That was what made them wild."

Sir George Reid, the former Premier of New Zealand, is a very big man. On one occasion he delivered a long speech. In addition to being very long it was very dull. He spoke of his declining years, and said, pathetically:

"It's a short time I shall have passed away, and will be with you no more."

Then the fat will be in the fire," yelled a voice from the gallery, and the big orator himself laughed heartily at the humorous sally.

Household Hints

To clean linoleum without washing, remove all the dust, then take a bit of flannel sprinkled with paraffin and rub the linoleum. It will not only make it appear like new, but will preserve it.

When milk is scorched while boiling, remove the pan from the fire and place it in cold water. Put a pinch of salt to the milk and stir it up, and the burnt taste will disappear.

Sal-ammoniac will clean a furred kettle. Fill the kettle with cold water, add a little sal-ammoniac to it and boil. The fur will dissolve. Well rinse the kettle afterward.

If you want pork crackling to be crisp instead of tough when cooked, rub it well all over with salad oil, and then sprinkle it with fine salt and cook in the usual way.

Permanganate of potash will banish the stains of all impurities. A solution should be passed through the filter until it comes out as pink as when it went in.

Tar may be removed from the hands by rubbing with the outside of fresh orange or lemon peel and drying immediately. The volatile oils dissolve tar so that it can be rubbed off.

When boiled and unboiled eggs get mixed upon them, and the boiled ones will spin round quite fast, while those which have not been cooked will hardly spin round once.

To relieve toothache, rub baking soda round the teeth and rinse the mouth with hot water.

Well Worth Knowing

He had only been married six months, but already wore a worried look. An older friend of his, with many years of matrimonial experience behind him, asked him what troubled him.

"Well, it's like this," he answered. "My wife is one of the best in the world, but I'm hanged if I can get her to mend my shirts."

"I suppose," answered the man of experience, "you go up to her and ask her to mend a shirt for you when it needs repairing?"

"Why, of course I do!"

"Ah, that's where you make a mistake! Now, what I do is this: When I find that one of my shirts wants mending I wave it about a bit, and say to my wife, 'This thing's no good. Where's the rag-bag?'"

"You're surely not going to throw that shirt away, are you?" she will say. 'Let me have a look at it!'"

"She takes it, gives one look at it, and says, 'Why, there's only a few holes! And before I can say Jack Robinson she gives me the shirt back mended!"

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"EVERY year is pretty much like the last year," declared the Manicure Lady. "I was hoping that this Summer a few guys would come in here to have their nails did without talking my head off about baseball, but the great national game is about the limit of their conservatory powers. The gent that just went out was howling himself nearly black in the face about Walter Johnson.

"It seemes to me, George, that a gent must have a kind of soft head to be losing sleep over a ball player. He says Johnson is the grandest pitcher that ever lived, and maybe he is, but what of it? Walter Johnson ain't no famous great man just because he is a great pitcher. He ain't a great man like Mister Roosevelt, which can go away somewhere and discover enough new things to keep the old editors busy. Walter Johnson never found no river running up a hill, and if he pitched a ball twice as fast as he can now, he wouldn't be able to discover no new race of people like Teddy done."

"Nobody ain't seen the new river or the new race of people yet," said the Head Barber. "Bryan said in his paper the other day that Roosevelt's idea of a new race of people was a race that had never heard of him. And maybe a river can run up a hill, but I want to see it first with my own eyes. All the rivers I ever seen had a habit of running down hill."

"Well, that ain't got anything to do with baseball," said the Manicure Lady. "All the talk I have heard lately has been about some idol of the diamond. If the gents that come in here ain't ready to faint when the Braves lost and Pittsburgh wins, they are sure about Stallings letting Pardus go. It seems to me that a lot of grown up men could find a better way to pass away their time.

"It's just as bad up to the house as it is down here. Wilfred and the old gent are just as loony as two ten-year-old boys, and they are all the time scrapping about their big leagues. Wilfred is a great rooter for the Braves, and father wants to see the Red Sox win every time out. Neither one of them knows why he is so strong for his team, either. Wilfred said that Stallings spoke to him once when he seen him in his billiard parlor, and the old gent likes the Red Sox on account of their name. The old gent is more patriotic than Wilfred, especially when he comes home nights, and he says that any team with a name like Red Sox ought to win. Anyhow, he can't see no one else, and between the two of them the rest of us is pleasantly in the dark at the time. I wish the game had never been invented."

"It's a great game, just the same," said the Head Barber, "I think everybody is interested in it."

"I ain't," declared the Manicure Lady. "I wouldn't be interested if there wasn't a baseball park in the country."

"I heard you praising Joe Wood the other day," said the Head Barber.

"Oh, I might have said that he was good looking when I seen his picture in a tobacco ad," admitted the Manicure Lady, "but I don't go and watch him pitching."

"Ain't you a bit interested in him?" asked the Head Barber.

"Only in a way," replied the Manicure Lady, "the same as I am interested in any good-looking gent. You don't need to look in the glass, either. That won't encourage you none."

Bite, but No Bark

"Yes," said the loquacious sailor, "that reminds me of the time when we was up the Amazon. The mosquitoes—why, I've never seen such things; they were nearly as terrible. They used to roost on the leaves and bark—"

Several tall stories had been flying round that evening, but this one was just a little bit too tall.

"Come, come!" remonstrated one of the party. "You don't expect us to believe that, do you? Hang it all, even we know that mosquitoes don't bark!"

"What d'you want to butt in for before I've finished?" queried the sailor indignantly. "What I was going to say was that they'd roost on the leaves and bark of the trees, and——"

But a well-aimed boot checked further utterance.

MELLEN RULE SCORED BY COMMERCE BOARD

len-Morgan-Rockefeller regime to extend the domination of this corporation over the whole transportation field in New England.

B. & M. ACQUIRED ILLEGALLY.

The acquisition of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad of the Boston & Maine by the New Haven is severely condemned in the report, which says:

"The management of the New Haven & Maine by the New Haven system was illegal and inexcusable. It has for extended periods of time had resulted in great waste and serious impairment of service."

The report attacks with equal severity the Boston & Maine directorate, which is charged with having "seriously neglected the purchase of the Boston & Maine stock for the New Haven, saying "As said before, it was unfair to the New Haven against Billard and all who bought or participated in this fraud and for stockholders."

Concerning the use to which Billard is alleged to have made two million dollars without putting up a cent of his own money, the commission finds that "Nothing was paid on account of his own for the stock in any of these transactions. He never bought a share of Boston & Maine stock where the New Haven did not furnish the money. He never sold a share of the Boston & Maine stock except as the New Haven dictated. All securities nominally held by the Billard company were kept in a subdivision of the vaults of the New Haven."

BILLARD BURNED BOOKS.

"The Billard Company was organized on the general counsel of the New Haven. The navigation company (the New England Navigation Company) furnished the $2,000,000 for which the Billard Company was capitalized. Billard testified that he did not pay any of his money for the stock.

"The whole capital stock of the Billard Company was used as his own by Charles S. Mellen as collateral security for his loan perfected borrowing of $10,000,000.

"The Billard Company paid out of its treasury $425,000 on account of C. L. Billard to repossess himself of the $2,000,000 capital stock of that company after the same had been pledged by Mr. Mellen.

"J. L. Billard purposely burned his books and papers so as to get them out of the way."

The report condemns "The domination of all the railroad by Mr. Morgan and Mr. Mellen and the absolute subordination of other members of the board of directors to the will of these two; the unwarranted increase in the New Haven's liabilities from $93,000,000 in 1903 to $417,000,000 in 1913; the increase of floating notes from nothing in 1903 to approximately $40,000,000 in 1913; the indefensible standard of financial ethics and the absence of business principles displayed by eminent directors in directing the destinies of the railroad in its attempt to establish a monopoly of the transportation in New England; the unlawful interests so corporate in the form of subsidiations the scattering of retailers to the stress of the times rendered no intended bills for services and who conducted the business which the railroad was a party; excessive use of a pretense to secrecy as to which the directors claimed to have no information and no power to control utterances of the press publishing reporters; the use of money and the profits of the road passes to legislators and their friends; the investment of funds in securities in a New England newspaper that the Boston Herald; the unlawful employment of political bosses in Rhode Island and elsewhere; and, not for the purpose of having these platforms any service, but to prevent them as Mr. Mellen expressed it, 'becoming active on the other side'; the inability of Oakleigh Thorne to account for $1,032,000 of the funds of the New Haven entrusted to him for carrying out the Westchester proposition; the dissipation of $1,500,000 to the distribution of $1,500,000 to corrupt purposes; the refunding about seventeen-sixths of the Westchester and Portchester franchises.

"A combination of all these has resulted in the present deplorable situation in which the affairs of the railroad are involved."

WHIPPLE CALLS ON DIRECTORS TO AID RECOVERY OF 'LOOT'

Sherman L. Whipple today took the first steps toward instituting a suit to recover from New Haven directors moneys wasted or illegally paid. No those directors are still solvent is now near bankruptcy.

This first step is in the form of a letter to the directors asking them to take action themselves to recover the money.

The letter states: "In our opinion the railroad is entitled to recover from the directors $153,000,000."

Extracts from the letter read:

"It is our opinion that the directors of the railroad have promoted or permitted these transactions are legally liable to the corporation for the losses which it has been thereby occasioned and must be compelled by law to make restitution.

"We do not suggest that no one suggest reasonable upon the assumption that the directors have necessarily acted in conflict amounting to fraud. It is quite true that many of the transactions to which we refer were authorized, but some of these transactions are tainted by fraud."

Wounded Prisoner Accused of Break

Dennis A. Shea, eighteen, of No. 162 Baldwin street, Charlestown, who was shot in the leg by Patrolman Michael J. Lynch while fleeing from Daly's saloon, No. 537 Main street, early today, is guarded in the Relief Hospital. When he recovers he will be arraigned on the charge of breaking and entering. Maurice Ryan, implicated with Shea in the affair, was arraigned in Charlestown court charged with breaking and entering the saloon. He was held in $1,000 bail.

Stop Giving Rations at Salem Monday

Colonel John E. Sumner announced today that the distribution of free rations at Salem will end next Monday. Hereafter the city will provide for deserving families unable to provide for themselves. The relief fund is expected to reach $1,500 to $2,000.

Salem continued to be a drawing attraction to sightseers and automobilists Sunday. A crowd estimated at 100,000 visited the ruins.

Chainmakers in Navy Yard Strike

The shop where flight rods are made at the Charlestown Navy Yard is idle. Sixty expert chainmakers and helpers are on strike. The first-class helpers demand $2.22 a day; the second-class helpers, $2. A committee of strikers today conferred with Commandant Conway and Naval Constructor William J. Baxter.

No Diplomacy, No TACT in This—But Facts

The Diplomats, the Grape Juice and Other Peace Gentlemen May Talk as They Like, BUT—

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

THE JAPANESE WILL NOT SETTLE IN THIS COUNTRY OR OWN ITS LAND.

The Japanese are admirable little people, wonderful and efficient in many ways.

We are glad to have them working in our laboratories, with the cancer germ or the wonderful adrenal gland.

We admire all that they have done in the past, and all that they say they are going to do in the future.

We appreciate the neat fashion in which they disposed of those two helpless national whales, China and Russia. It was a fine imitation of a fox terrier chasing a cow in each of those wars.

We give the Japanese due credit for everything—BUT WE ARE NOT GOING TO HAVE THE JAPANESE IN THIS COUNTRY, AS LAND OWNERS, IN COMPETITION WITH WHITE LABOR, AS INTRODUCERS OF THE ORIENTAL, ASIATIC METHODS, STANDARDS AND IDEAS ON THIS SOIL.

To the lawmakers in Washington, to those that are peaceful, drink grape juice and take the dove for their emblem, we say most earnestly this:

If you want to preserve peace and avoid bloodshed, DON'T OPPOSE THE PLANS FOR KEEPING THE JAPANESE OUT.

You might by diplomacy, by taking advantage of a lull between elections, bring Japanese into this country.

If you did that—WOE TO YOU AND WOE TO THOSE JAPANESE.

The Japanese can no more settle in numbers among the inhabitants of the United States than could so many brown rabbits settle among foxes.

THE FOXES WOULD NOT ALLOW IT.

Be as diplomatic as you like, as polite and suave as you like. Shed tears, express regrets.

BUT DO NOT TRY TO OVERRULE THE WILL OF THE PEOPLE IN THE MATTER OF THE MIXTURE OF RACES.

Never mind the fact that "Professor Boaz" says that it would be a good thing to mix the white race and the Japanese race. Perhaps it would. It might be a good thing to mix foxes and rabbits—but it doesn't happen.

Let grape juice and other peace-statesmen observe the methods of England.

England is Japan's ally.

BUT THE JAPANESE CANNOT COLONIZE IN CANADA, or in British Columbia, or in Australia, or in New Zealand—OR IN ANY BRITISH TERRITORY.

For the English are wise. They know that the colonists of England would not for a moment tolerate Asiatic colonization and land ownership, and they are wise enough not to try to force the people to do that WHICH THEY WILL NOT DO.

The people of the United States WILL NOT HAVE THE JAPANESE OR THE CHINESE IN NUMBERS.

Take as timid a view as you like, imagine that if we don't permit the Japanese to come in they will come over here and conquer us.

Admit that they COULD conquer us.

Still, they would not settle in this country or possess it.

For conquered once, or twice, or ten times, the inhabitants of the country would still keep at it, AND KILL OFF THE JAPANESE AS THEY CAME HERE.

The white race discovered the country, settled the country, plowed the country, own the country, AND WILL KEEP THE COUNTRY.

For the African colored people now here the white race is RESPONSIBLE.

The negroes were brought here against their will. The nation owes them fair treatment.

But for all others—yellow Asiatics, or blacks of other races—the national door is closed.

If the lawmakers will UNDERSTAND that they will save themselves trouble, save Japan humiliation and avoid the very complications which they say they fear.

Governor Walsh Is Right

Governor Walsh has requested the auditor not to approve hotel bills and charges for restaurant tips which members of salaried State commissions render to the Commonwealth.

The Governor is quite right. The place of business of these commissioners and State employes is in Boston. If they choose to live away from their place of business, it is THEIR concern and the cost of such an arrangement they should pay themselves.

The State does not pay the hotel expenses of the Governor or of the members of the Legislature. The case of the other salaried employes of the State is not different.

It appears that some of these complacent gentlemen have even charged the Commonwealth for the tips they have given to waiters. The coolness of this practice is almost incredible.

Teach Children to Love All Dumb Animals

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

COPIES of the following appeal were sent to all bishops and prominent members of churches by Mrs. Daniel Wright of Bankemere, Riverton, N. J.:

"For many years it has been my sincere desire to have some words of prayer for kindness to dumb animals included in the Litany.

Mercy on Animals, Too.

"Therefore, I suggest that one clause, 'That it may please Thee to have mercy upon all men,' be extended so as to read: 'That it may please Thee to have mercy upon all men and inclins their hearts to have mercy upon all fowls of the air, beasts and cattle.'

"Will you be willing to approve of this letter and to forward it with such approval to the proper committee or delegates that it may come before the next General Convention?"

This appeal was made just before the last convention took place, and no report has been made concerning the result.

In all probability it was not acted upon.

Yet the letter must have caused many of the good men to think along new lines.

Our churches do not take as active a part as they should in this humane work. In a general way all clergymen and all earnest members of churches use their influence to make the world kinder and more humane.

But there should be a systematized plan of work for humane education of the young in every church.

Every church systematizes its foreign mission labors and its home mission labors. Children are awakened to sympathy for their heathen fellows, and their pennies are given freely to ameliorate their condition in consequence. Just so should a persistent educational scheme be prepared, to teach children sympathy for dumb beasts and fowls of the air.

Pastors Should Urge It

Once each month every pastor should introduce into his discourse some strong plea for better treatment of animals.

The doing away with the needless and harmful blinder, the curtailing of the use of the horrible over check rein, which inflicts such pain and discomfort on the kindest and most unselfish of animals, the willing horse, the lighting of stables, the blanketing of the horse in Winter, when left standing in the cold; the providing of homes for domestic animals in leaving for town or country—all these points should be touched upon frequently enough by the pastors of all churches to impress them on the minds of listeners.

Should Give Out Leaflets

Every church should, twice a year, if not oftener, obtain leaflets from humane organizations to scatter in the church pews.

And Sunday school teachers should be instructed to be persistent in talking and reading these things to children once a month.

It is a credit to our law makers and a sad reflection upon our women that a law is in full sway forbidding the use of dead birds or any decoration which encourages the slaughter of birds on hats or heads.

The reflection on woman is a serious one.

She should never have made the law a necessity.

Dead birds or portions of dead birds in no way give comfort or health to the wearer, as the advocates of furs claim is true of that part of woman's wearing apparel. Even the foes to furs wear shoes, and it seems in the clothing of our bodies, if not in its nourishment, that animals must to some extent be sacrificed.

But our birds can be saved from needless slaughter since they serve no purpose dead, save to cater to woman's unthinking and selfish vanity.

And living they serve many beautiful purposes, they delight the eye; they please the ear, and they protect our splendid trees and our orchards and our harvest fields from pests.

Church members and mothers of children would do well to send a two-cent stamp to the Humane Society, Albany, New York, and ask for leaflets on the subject.

Teach the Children Early

It will afford them an opportunity to help the work along in easy and simple ways and awaken the minds of their little ones on this important subject. The child who is taught early to think of his responsibility to dumb creatures and to feel sympathy and affection for them will not grow up a cruel or criminal man or woman.

More Truth Than Poetry

This Will Be News to Roger Sullivan

It is alleged that the public utilities in Chicago are controlled by six men. Who are the other five?

Let us hope that President Wilson made deeper researches in the preparation of his histories than he did in getting out his biography of Thomas D. Jones.

Is Matrimony a Failure?

Senator O'Gorman said six months ago that the Democratic honeymoon was over. Judging from the rebellion in Congress, it looks as if the next step was to be an application for an interlocutory decree.

The Event Is Well Worth It

This Is Not to Be Taken Seriously

Gasoline is now eleven cents in Detroit, which ought to make Detroit something of an automobile centre.

The Warrior

HIS hand has wrested many a crown
From tyrants in their pride;
His hand has struck the pirate down
And tossed him in the tide.
And robber hordes in countless lands
In wild confusion flee,
When they descry, across the sands,
His flag upon the sea.

THE redskin cowered in his path,
When forth he used to go
In terrible, avenging wrath
And lay the chiefs ains low.
And craven bandits far and near,
Well know his dreadful fame,
And pale and tremble when they hear
The mention of his name!

BUT now the last black blood is shed
And all the wars are won,
When all the murderous hosts are dead,
The warrior's work is done.
No longer fares he forth to seek
Sea-wolf or robber band;
With mother's kisses on his cheek
He's off to Slumberland.

John Barleycorn Must Have Helped

The "Limit of the Universe"

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—"HOW can it be hoped to determine the limit of the universe, when, theoretically, there is no limit to 'the magnitude of telescopes'?"

A.—Man, as at present developed mentally, cannot think of the meaning of the term "limit of the universe," because the limit is space, and none is able to think of infinite space nor any other infinity.

To think of an infinity is to be possessed of an infinite mind. But the highest of all humans, high mathematicians, do not by any means claim to be of infinite mind. They—the few—have more exalted concepts of what infinity may be than all humans combined, but modestly say that they cannot think infinity.

Theoretically and practically there is a limit to magnitude of telescopes. If not, man would be able to make an infinite telescope. But human genius is now being taxed to its present limit of skill in making a mirror 100 inches in diameter, here in Pasadena.

Q.—"WHEN, where and how was the sun's altitude obtained, or is assumed?"—H. Knarf, Newark, N. J.

A.—The sun's altitude is obtained accurately by measuring with a sextant on shipboard at sea, or by an instrument called an all-azimuth on land. When is answered by saying at any time when any person desires to know the altitude of the sun. Where, is answered by saying at any point on earth where the sun is visible above the horizon. How, is by setting the lenses of the instrument—several kinds are in use—and reading the fine rulings on the circles. And people handling these delicate instruments would not for a minute think of making an assumption of the value of the sun's altitude; for if easy and then a ship might dash on rocks.

The Training of Children

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED

Author of "The Etiquette of New York Today"

THE birthright of every child is to have a happy, wholesome childhood. From infancy children should have a loving, patient, consistent training which will help them to adjust themselves to their environment and to understand their obligations to themselves and to others. In this way childhood will be made a preparation towards contentment, happiness and usefulness in life.

Parents are apt to forget that they are not owners of their children, but are divinely appointed guardians, whose duty it is to train the children to become good, and useful men and women. Children are not always to be children. Conscientious parents realize that they must act for their children's benefit and deal with them with absolute justice.

Intelligent, interested parents, who wish to learn and wish to improve, can bring to the home-training of the children the highest standards of conduct. The task is not easy—a task worth doing is never easy—but in this labor of duty and love, parents will find a joy which they would not exchange for a life of ease or avoidance of care.

It is acknowledged by those who understand child-study that the first three years are of serious importance in the formation of habits. Children may be taught right actions long before they realize that these are of enduring value. Children have instincts and they discover their power by crying for what they want. If they are indulged they become tyrants, making life miserable for others and laying a foundation of irritability and selfishness for themselves.

But here it is that a mother needs self-control, common sense and gentle firmness to develop the child's self-control. If a child is allowed to scream for what he wants, or allowed to be destructive, he acquires that he has that privilege. When he has learned to resist the temptation to drag down an ornament from the table, something has been gained in self-control.

It is not by scolding, nagging or by saying "Don't!" that a mother can teach children. It is only by the personal self-control of the mother, the patient insistence on what is right for the child's sake, and by the strength of soul which emanates from the mother and produces in the child the wish to be self-controlled that a lesson of this sort can be imparted. A child's loving trust in the mother will then establish right-doing and obedience.

Frequently mothers do not realize that it is sheer weariness on the child's part that causes fretfulness. The very simple practice of absolute regularity in hours for sleep is helpful to discipline, as well as physical growth and strength, and results in developing a peaceful, contented disposition.

It is unjust toward a little child for a mother to permit anything to interfere with proper and regular hours of rest. Often one pities tired, fretful little children who are taken about on shopping expeditions by their mothers, or who are out with their parents in the streets in the evening long after the hours when children should be in their beds.

Unless children learn good habits before they are seven or eight years old the loss is almost irretrievable. Habits of modesty, cleanliness and orderliness must be learned, generous habits in sharing toys with others, neat habits in putting away toys after playing with them, considerate habits in not being noisy if their mother has a headache.

These may be examples of fundamentals in conduct which children should learn in their earliest years.

DIRECT VOTE THIS FALL

H. J. C.—Every State in which there is an election for United States Senators this Fall will vote direct for the candidates who will be nominated by the various parties at the primaries. One-third of the Senate will go out of office on the 4th of next March, and the successors chosen in November will take their seats at that time.

NOTARIES PUBLIC

N. M. P.—Notaries public are said to have had their origin in a class of men appointed by the early Christian bishops to collect the acts or memoirs of the martyrs of the first century. The office was afterward changed to a legal employment, such as the attesting of deeds and other writings, so as to establish their authenticity in any other century.
